

Eric LeMarque

Eric became trapped snowboarding on Mammoth Mountain in the High Sierra Mountain Range and survived eight days in sub-freezing cold temperatures fighting for his life. His incredible story and world record survival story of perseverance and guts is the basis for the upcoming film “6 Below” starring Josh Hartnett.

Author, Olympic Athlete,
Inspirational Speaker,
Amazing Survivor

“This is the most jaw-dropping story we’ve ever reviewed.” -The Washington Post

“One of the top 20 most amazing survival stories in history.” -People Magazine

In Depth...

On February 6th, 2004, Eric, an accomplished snowboarder, set off from the top of 12,000-foot Mammoth Mountain in California's vast Sierra Nevada mountain range. Wearing only a long sleeve shirt, a thin wool hat, the shells of his snowboarding pants and a light-weight jacket and with only four pieces of gum for food, he soon found himself chest-deep in snow and trapped in the wilderness. By nightfall he knew he was in a fight for his life to get back to civilization. Eric survived eight-days in sub-freezing temperatures, haunted by wolves, battling blizzards, hunger, altitude sickness, and hypothermia. When finally taken off the mountain by a Black Hawk Helicopter initially doing a body recovery and his body temperature at 86 degrees, he would earn the name, 'The Miracle Man' by stunned National Guard rescuers.

Eric's journey was not complete when he was whisked off the mountain, as he ended up losing both of his legs below the knees due to the complications of frostbite and had to endure multiple surgeries. Never to be kept down ... Eric, an overachiever and diehard athlete was back on his snowboard just a year later at the top of Mammoth Mountain.

This former professional, Olympic and International ice hockey player has one of the most famous, unrelenting and compelling survivor stories in history. Eric shared his story in the book "Crystal Clear" and in his new book "6-Below" which serves as the basis for feature length film of the same name. The incredible and heart wrenching story of survival stars Josh Hartnett and Mira Sorvino. The film will be hitting the silver screen and is slated to premiere on October 12th, 2017.

For more information about:

Eric LeMarque

contact:

Scott Kirkpatrick

Scott@ChicagoSEP.com

312-543-1457

